What we're doing today

- Introduction to online and digital engagement in PB
 - Case studies – learning from Scotland and beyond
 - Practical considerations of online and digital engagement
 - Interactive demos – try some tools!
- Opportunities for discussion and questions

A photograph showing a person from behind, wearing a brown sweater and glasses, looking at a table. The table is covered with a white cloth and has various items on it, including a laptop, a bowl, and some papers. In the background, there is a blue wall decorated with colorful balloons and a banner that reads 'FOR COMMUNITY ASSOCIATIONS'. Another person is visible in the background, standing near a doorway.

PB is a way for people to directly vote on how local money should be spent.

PB comes in all shapes and sizes, but basically it looks like this:

1. Ideas are generated about how a budget should be spent

2. People vote for their priorities

3. The projects with the most votes gets funded

Mostly, participatory budgeting is about bringing people together at local events. Sometimes it also happens online, where digital tools can help even more people to get involved.

If PB is so good....
let's get more people involved!!

Could digital engagement be ~~the answer...?~~
an answer...?!

Digital tools and Scotland's Participatory Budgeting programme

A report by the Democratic Society for
the Scottish Government
February 2016

RESEARCH WITH LOCAL COUNCILS

- Digital engagement can provide important support for PB processes, but it cannot completely replace offline engagement
- Digital can ensure that a wider range of voices are involved
- No single tool is significantly better than others in all situations, and no universal platform for participation.

Digital tools and Scotland's Participatory Budgeting programme

A report by the Democratic Society for
the Scottish Government
February 2016

Digital engagement = community engagement using tech

- Complements work you are already doing
- Reaches new audiences
- Skills, training and benefits for staff

What does digital look like?

This...

...and this!

PB comes in all shapes and sizes, but basically it looks like this:

1. Ideas are generated about how a budget should be spent

2. People vote for their priorities

3. The projects with the most votes gets funded

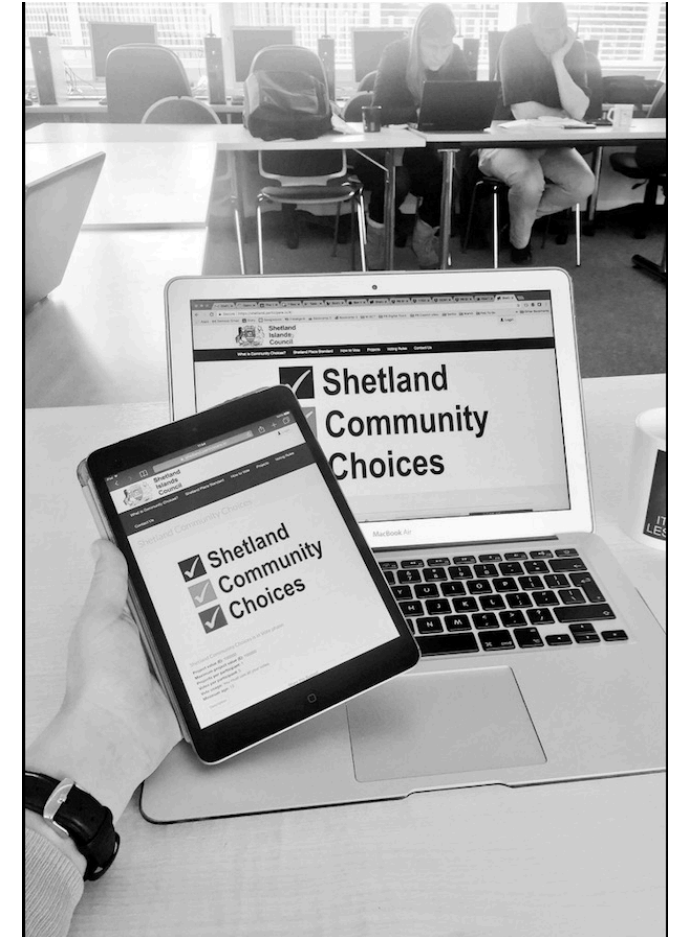

Mostly, participatory budgeting is about bringing people together at local events. Sometimes it also happens online, where digital tools can help even more people to get involved.

Some reasons for doing PB:

1. build trust
2. create space for deliberation
3. empower people.

Digital engagement can benefit by:

1. involving more people
2. overcoming barriers of time and place
3. starts conversations, build relationships with community and trust.

IF YOU BUILD IT,
THEY WILL COME.

Benefits and challenges

- Reach new audiences
- Involve more people in decision making
- Overcomes barriers of time and place
- Starts conversation and builds relationships

- Digital divide (not everyone is online)
- Echo-chambers and usual suspects
- Cannot completely replace face-to-face engagement

SUPPORT: What about people who are not online?

- Trained Dundee Council Staff to help get out the vote using 70 tablets across the city
- Pop up events at schools, sheltered housing, libraries & football stadiums
- User guides available and support telephone number
- Manual Email address process to allow people with out an email address to take part

Did you find the voting website easy to use?

4,355 responses

- Easy to use, straight forward, easy to navigate.
- “Potentially very empowering for Dundee's communities.”
- “I thought the site was designed well and very interactive.”
- “Great idea! More please!”
- “More information of budget breakdown on projects.”
- “Allow the public to put forward ideas”

Lessons from Scotland

1. Not build it and they will come (tools not a magic solution)
2. Security and verification (accessibility)
3. Active facilitation helps
4. Builds on work that you're doing already
5. Deliberation online – qualitative research
6. Process not project (PB as a cycle)

Practical considerations of online and digital engagement

- How can you use online or digital tools, offline?
- Go where people are – network mapping?
- Who can you count on to give support to the process?
- Who else do you need to involve or inform?
- Training to upskill community members
- Remember: bespoke adjustments to digital tools can cost

- Depending on the tool you choose, this could include moderation of conversations, approving or denying user registrations, gathering data and analytics and creating and publishing web content
- Do you want to include surveys or questionnaires at the end of the online user journey? If so, what will you ask and why?
- Have a named lead – train the trainer, clear responsibilities. Who needs to be trained to use the digital tool and who just needs to be aware of how it generally works?

Communications and branding

- Ensure consistency across the project
- Use social media to promote
- Keep all the ideas in one place.

Voting Options

- 1 person, 1 vote
- Weighted multiple votes (Oor Bit Fife – three ward areas, 3 votes)
- Optimum number of votes vs. proposals (D21 / SoRP)
- Scoring each idea one a scale (Leith Decides - two budgets, 1-5)
- Option for – and + votes

Ensure any offline voting processes matches exactly.

Verification

I.D. verification

Postcode

Council Tax no.

Accessibility V Security

Too little – not secure

Too much – fewer participants
